The Adi Kailash & Om Parvat Yatra takes you into the Vyas Valley of Pithoragarh district — one of the most sacred and least-crowded Himalayan circuits in India. Adi Kailash, also called Chhota Kailash, mirrors the form of Mount Kailash, and Om Parvat carries a naturally formed ॐ in snow on its face.

This 7-day itinerary is built around safety at altitude: a full acclimatisation day at Gunji (3,200 m) before the darshan days at Jolingkong (4,572 m) and Nabhidhang (4,340 m). The region falls inside the Inner Line, so every yatri needs an Inner Line Permit — our team handles the paperwork and tells you exactly which documents to carry.

We are a private tour operator based in Pithoragarh, run by Uttarakhand locals. The route, the homestays, and the road conditions of the Vyas Valley are home ground for our team.

Day-wise itinerary

1 Pithoragarh → Dharchula

915 m

Meet the team at Pithoragarh and drive along the Kali river to Dharchula, the border town that is the gateway to the Vyas Valley. Evening briefing, document check for the Inner Line Permit, and overnight stay.

2 Dharchula → Gunji

3,200 m

Early start through Tawaghat and Lakhanpur. Permits are checked en route as we climb into the high Vyas Valley to Gunji, our base for the darshan days. Short evening walk to help acclimatisation.

3 Acclimatisation at Gunji + Kalapani Kali temple

3,600 m

A deliberate acclimatisation day. Visit the Kali temple at Kalapani, the source of the Kali river, and the ITBP-maintained temple complex. Light walking only — this day makes the next two days safer and more enjoyable.

4 Gunji → Jolingkong — Adi Kailash darshan → Gunji

4,572 m

The heart of the yatra. Drive to Jolingkong for darshan of Adi Kailash (Chhota Kailash) and a visit to the Shiva temple and Parvati Sarovar at its base. Return to Gunji by evening.

5 Gunji → Nabhidhang — Om Parvat darshan → Gunji

4,340 m

Drive to Nabhidhang to view the natural ॐ formation in snow on Om Parvat — one of the most remarkable sights in the Himalaya. Time for darshan and photographs before returning to Gunji.

6 Gunji → Dharchula

915 m

Descend the valley back to Dharchula. Evening at leisure by the Kali river — a gentle end after two high-altitude days.

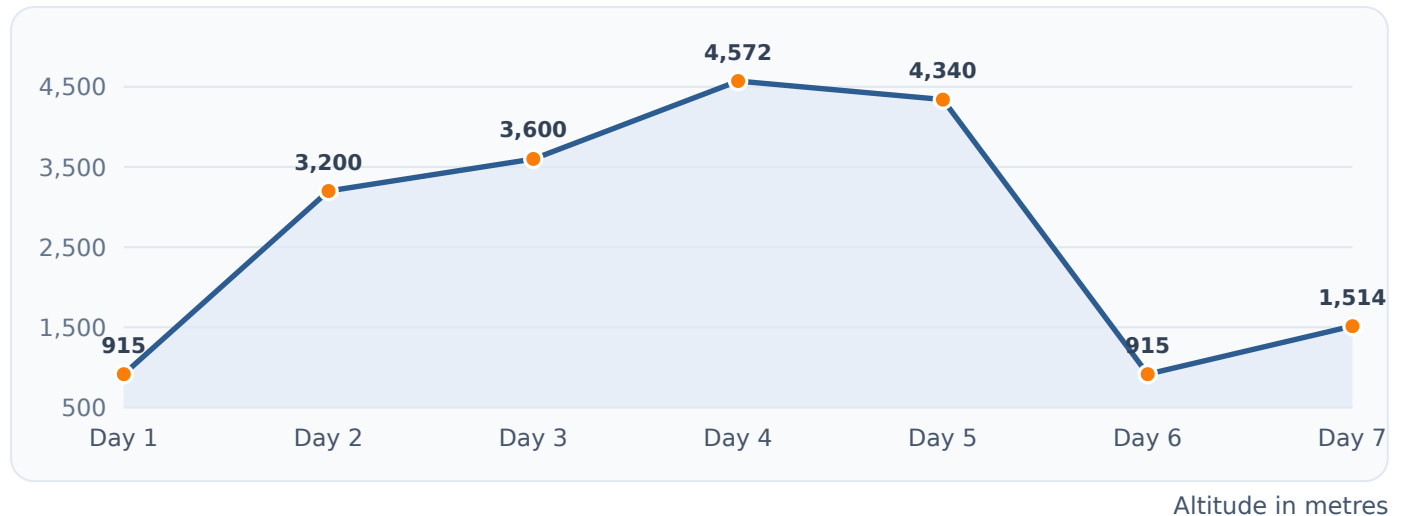

7 Dharchula → Pithoragarh — yatra concludes

1,514 m

Morning drive back to Pithoragarh where the yatra concludes. We help you connect onward to Kathgodam, Haldwani, or your next destination.

Frequently asked questions

How difficult is this Adi Kailash Yatra?

It is vehicle-based — the longest walks are short strolls at the darshan sites — but the route spends two days above 4,300 m. With our dedicated acclimatisation day at Gunji, most healthy travellers between 12 and 70 complete it comfortably.

Why does your itinerary have 7 days when others sell 5?

The extra days buy a full acclimatisation day at Gunji (3,200 m) before the high darshan days. Cheaper itineraries cut it; headaches, AMS, and turn-backs are the usual price. We will not run the route without it.

Is the Inner Line Permit included?

Yes — permit fees and the entire application are included. You send us your Aadhaar, photos, and a medical fitness certificate on WhatsApp at least 2–3 weeks before departure, and our team files everything with the Pithoragarh administration.

How do I reach Pithoragarh for the start?

Overnight trains reach Kathgodam or Tanakpur, with shared and private taxis onward to Pithoragarh; Naini Saini airport at Pithoragarh has limited flights. Tell us where you are coming from and we will plan this leg with you — or take our Kathgodam or Delhi variant instead.

What are the stay and food arrangements?

Clean guesthouses and homestays on sharing basis at Dharchula and Gunji, with fresh vegetarian meals — breakfast and dinner daily and packed lunches on darshan days. This is a remote border valley: expect simple, warm, and honest rather than hotel-style.

Is mobile network available on the route?

Reliable up to Dharchula, patchy to absent beyond Tawaghat. Treat the darshan days as offline and tell your family in advance — we share the escort's contact plan before departure.
