The Chopta weekend is the best introduction to the high Himalaya that a Delhi work calendar allows: leave Friday night, stand on a 4,000 m summit Sunday morning, and be back at your desk on Monday.

The centrepiece is Tungnath — at 3,680 m the highest Shiva temple in the world and one of the Panch Kedars — reached by a steady 3.5 km stone-paved trail that first-timers manage comfortably. The final kilometre to Chandrashila is steeper, and the reward is one of the great sunrise panoramas of Garhwal: Nanda Devi, Trishul, Kedar dome, and Chaukhamba in one sweep.

In winter the same trail becomes an easy snow trek — the temple closes, but the summit stays reachable on clear days and the meadows turn white. We run this trip nearly year-round, skipping only the peak monsoon weeks.

We are a private tour operator based in Pithoragarh, run by Uttarakhand locals.

Day-wise itinerary

1 Delhi → overnight drive to the hills

216 m

Board at Akshardham / Anand Vihar late evening and sleep through the drive via Haridwar and Devprayag into the Mandakini valley.

2 Arrive Chopta — meadows, acclimatisation walk, camp night

2,680 m

Reach Chopta by late morning. Rest, brunch, and an easy afternoon walk in the bughyal meadows (optional Deoriatal detour). Evening bonfire and an early night under the stars.

3 Tungnath & Chandrashila summit → overnight drive → Delhi

4,000 m

Pre-dawn start up the 3.5 km paved trail to Tungnath, the world's highest Shiva temple, then the steeper kilometre to Chandrashila's 4,000 m summit for the full Himalayan panorama. Descend by early afternoon and drive back, reaching Delhi early next morning.
